Northern California

Fair skies with above normal daytime temperatures will continue through the rest of the week as a strong high pressure ridge remains entrenched along the west coast.

State Weather Map

III. FIRES:

Overall Fire Risk:

Northern California

Continuing dry weather conditions will keep all dead fuel size classes much drier than normal. Dormant brush fuels will remain in at dry, late fall levels. We are experiencing various stages of long term drought with Severe to locally extreme drought conditions covering most of Northern California (see link below). There have been record low rainfall totals in many areas this calendar year adding to ongoing longer term drought over the past 2 1/2 years. Fire danger will be somewhat unseasonably elevated mostly during breezy times, especially at lower elevations in the southern end of the Geographic Area.

Southern California

Dead fuels will continue to dry through the forecast period due to well above normal temperatures and very low humidity. The warm and dry conditions will also allow for light initial attack activity across the region through the forecast period.

Preparedness Levels:

National Preparedness Level 1

Northern California

Preparedness Level 1 Multi-Agency Coordination System MACS Mode 2
